What is the OEI Institute?

The institution that governs the Operational Entropy Index methodology.

The OEI Institute maintains the methodology's canon, definitions, evidence and practice standards, and its deliberate evolution. It supports consistent application through practitioner capability, documentation, structured workflows, diagnostic tools, and software.

OEI Institute is the governing institution. Operational Entropy Index (OEI) is the methodology it governs.

What the Institute does

Governs the method

Maintains the established OEI canon, methodological definitions, and standards for evidence and practice.

Develops capability

Builds practitioner development, competency assessment, and certification pathways under Institute governance.

Supports application

Maintains documentation, workflows, tools, and software that support repeatable use of OEI.

The five OEI pillars: Founder Dependency; Knowledge Logistics; Workflow Velocity; Tool Discipline; Handoff Integrity

How organizations work with OEI

Build internal capability

Company-Sponsored training prepares two different people, one Researcher and one Practitioner.

Work with practitioners

Independent Consultants serve their own clients. OEI Native Practitioners deliver for the Institute.

OEI has two roles. Researchers prepare traceable evidence. Practitioners interpret it and lead diagnosis and recommendations. Company-Sponsored trains two people for $10,000. Independent Consultant trains one person for both roles for $12,000. OEI Native qualifies a Practitioner for Institute delivery for $15,000. Each pathway is 60% upfront for non-refundable training and assessment. Passing earns certification and authorization. The 40% balance is due only after passing. The first renewal year is waived. Annual renewal is $500 per internally employed Company-Sponsored Practitioner, $600 for Independent Consultants, and $750 for OEI Native Practitioners. Researchers have no renewal fee. Full terms: operationalentropy.com/practitioner-development/.